AN INDEPENDENT WEEKLY JOURNAL
OF LITERATURE,
EDUCATION,
POLITICS,
GENERAL NEWS,
AND LOCAL INTERESTS.

It is generally acknowledged to be the equal of the best newspapers published and superior to most country papers. It is a matter of pride to these towns which it so ably and well represents.

To sustain these assertions, it would be easy to give a large selection from opinions of its readers and patrons which constantly come to hand. But the paper will speak for itself.

Subscription price, $3 a year or $1 for six months.

HETTIE MARVIN.

THE GIRL THAT WOULDN'T TELL A LIE.

When the British and Tories attacked New London, Conn., in 17—, and set a price on the head of Governor Griswold, the latter fled to the town of L—, where his cousin, Mrs. Marvin, hid him, for some days, in a secluded farm-house. But at length the subtle foe discovered his retreat, and one sunny afternoon in May he was routed from his hiding-place, by the tidings that a band of horsemen were approaching to capture him.

His only chance of escape was to reach the mouth of a little creek, which emptied into the Connecticut river, just above the entrance of the latter into Long Island Sound. There he had a boat stationed, with two faithful attendants hidden beneath the high banks of the creek. The distance from the farm-house to the boat was two miles by the narrow traveled road. But a little sheep path across the farmer's orchards would bring him to the road, only a mile from the boat; and save a quarter's length of his fearful run for life.

Just where the narrow path from the orchard opened into the road, Hettie Marvin sat with her dog Towser, tending the bleaching of the household linen. The long web of spun or woven during the long winter months, was whitened in May, and thus made ready for use. The business of bleaching was well economized, being usually done by the younger daughters of the family, who were not old enough to spin, or strong enough to order by a practical workman, at prices that cannot fail to please. $4.50, $5.00, $5.50, $6.00, Super-Extra Fine $7.00.

The roll of linen was taken by the farmer's son, "help" to a grassy plot, beside a spring or meadow brook. There it was thoroughly wetted and spread upon the green turf, to take the best heat of the sun by day and the dew at night. The little maiden who tended it, would sit near it.

Thus sat Hettie Marvin, the young daughter of Gov. Griswold's cousin, when he hunted friend sprang past her, into the road, to escape from his pursuers. Hettie was a timid child of about twelve years; yet thoughtful and wise beyond many of her elders. She was frightened by the heading horse with which the Governor rushed across the meadow. But she quietly comprehended the scene, and instantly quieted her faithful Towser, who, though a friend of the family guest, thought it becoming to bark loudly at his hurried steps.

There was forethoughtful arrested the Governor's notice, and suggested a scheme to delude his pursuers. "Hettie," he said earnestly, "I am flying for my life; and unless I can reach my boat before I am overtaken, I am a lost man. You see the road forks here. But you must tell those who are chasing me, that I have gone up the road to catch the mail wagon, which will soon be along, you know. Then they will turn off the other way."

"O cousin," said the little girl, in an agony of distress, "I cannot tell a lie; indeed I cannot; why did you tell me which way you were going?"

"Hettie, dear child, surely you would not betray me to my death! Hark! they are coming—I hear the click of their horses' feet. Oh, Hettie, tell them I have gone up the road instead of down; and heaven will bless you."

"Heaven never blesses those who speak falsely, cousin! But I will not tell them which way you go, even if they kill me; so run as quickly as possible."

"It's of no use; unless I can deceive them, I am a dead man."

"Cousin, cousin, hide under my web of cloth; they'd never think of looking here for you. Come, get down as swift as you can; and I'll cover you, and stand sprinkling my linen."

"It's my only chance, child; I'll get down as you say." And, stilling the alarm to the world, the Governor was soon hidden under the ample folds of the cloth.

Angry that their expected prey had escaped from the house where they hoped to secure him, the six mounted Tories, headed by a British officer, dashed along the road in swift pursuit. At sight of the little girl in the meadow, the leader of the party paused.

"Child," he said sternly, "have you seen a man running away hereabouts?"

"Yes, sir," replied Hettie, trembling and flushing.

"Which way did he go?"

"I promised not to tell, sir."

"But you must, or take the consequences."

"I said I wouldn't tell, if you killed me," sobbed the frightened girl.

"I'll have it out of her," exclaimed the furious officer, with an oath.

"Let me speak to her," said his Tory guide. "I know the child, I believe. Isn't your name Hettie Marvin?" he asked pleadingly.

"Yes, sir."

"And this man that ran by you a few minutes ago, was your mother's cousin, wasn't he?"

"Yes, sir, he was."

"Well, you are friends of his—what did he say to you when he came along?"

"He—he told me—that he was flying for his life."

"Just so, Hettie; that was very true. I hope he won't have to fly far. Where was he
